AUDIBLE,

THE LARGEST AUDIOBOOK PLATFORM

Audible is a digital audiobook and podcast platform, owned by Amazon, where users can purchase individual pieces to listen, or subscribe for monthly credits. While available globally, it is also the largest audiobook producer and retailer in the United States.

M&C Saatchi Performance have worked with Audible for many years across digital channels and as with all our clients, continually test & learn to ensure we are delivering the most efficient campaigns.

Our brief was to increase brand engagement for Audible in Canada so that the target audience understood how Audible's products are perfect for COVID-19 at home environment.

THE OBJECTIVE:

Increase brand engagement for Audible in Canada so that the target audience understood how Audible's products are perfect for COVID-19 at home environment.

THE CHALLENGE:

We focused on creating high impact ad units that spoke to the audience's need for home-based activities during COVID, and custom editorial to engage users with Audible's offerings.

We hypothesized that relatable content would boost audience engagement through empathetic & culturally relevant creative messaging.

OUR APPROACH:

- ✓ Leveraged custom content creation & high impact media to drive brand engagement & increase brand consideration.
- ✓ Developed custom articles to tell a unique story & drive brand connection across publisher site, chosen for historical engagement for the brand & over-indexing on GWI.
- ✓ Observed the role of relatable content using CTR as a KPI in relation to standard media.

UNDERSTANDING THE IMPACT OF CUSTOM CONTENT

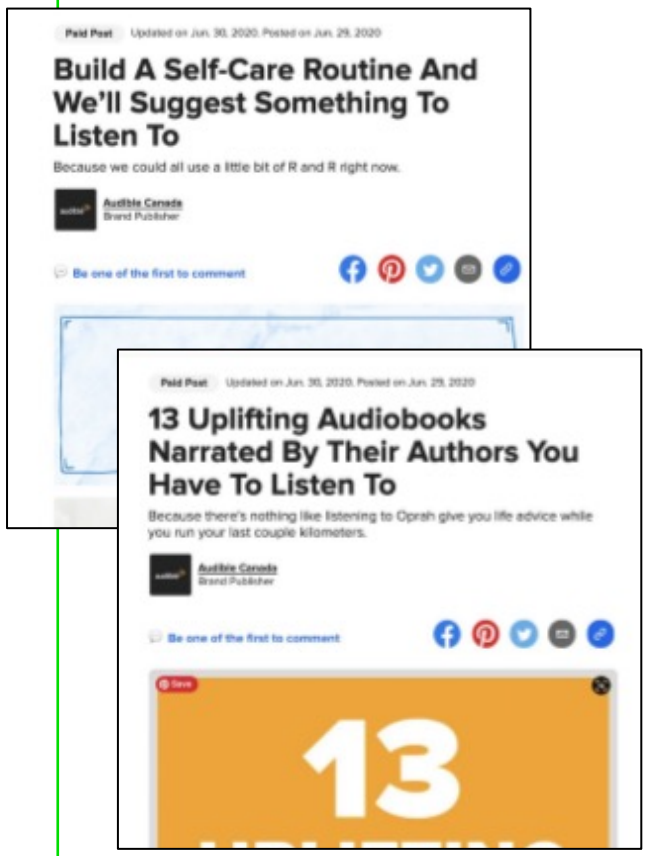
CUSTOM CONTENT



Audible's ads were placed along co-branded articles created by highly-regarded and relatable suppliers. Editorials featured one listicle and two quizzes showcasing audiobooks and authors available on Audible's platform. Best practices informed that listicles with ~10 items drove the strongest click engagement, while quizzes had strong overall article engagement.

THE HYPOTHESIS: by creating engaging editorial, the audience will spend more time with the content and thus have increased engagement and overall brand consideration, as measured by CTR vs. standard banners.

18x

HIGHER CONTENT ENGAGEMENT

The in-post CTR for branded content for Audible was 18x stronger than standard banner performance, supporting the hypothesis that content is a strong way to engage with the audience.

UNDERSTANDING THE IMPACT OF HIGH IMPACT MEDIA

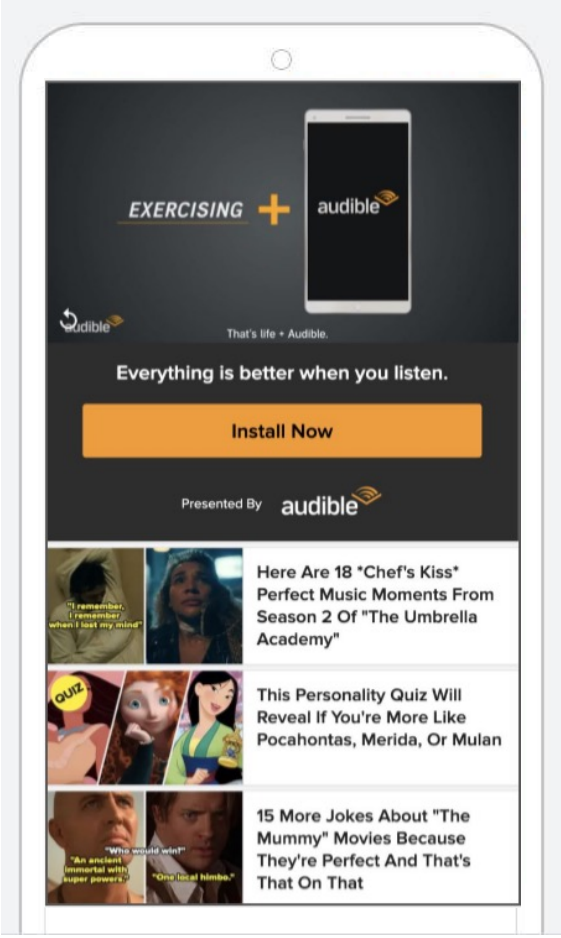
2x

HIGHER CTR THAN BENCHMARK

High impact banners had a 2x higher CTR compared to supplier benchmark for spotlight units, demonstrating that using relatable content, in conjunction with the eye-catching media, will increase audience brand consideration.

HIGH IMPACT MEDIA



Spotlight units are high-impact rich media hero units that can house a video and a click-out within the same unit. They are expandable and stick at the top of the screen to capture a user's attention. Audible's ads provided a relatable experience by highlighting one of three at-home activities that are better with audiobooks.

THE HYPOTHESIS: since the high-impact unit is larger and provides a richer experience than a standard mobile banner, it will capture attention and the content will create a relatable connection with the user, thus resulting in a higher CTR than standard banners.

REACH

Leveraged top-performing audiences and platforms with key suppliers to achieve scale.

By partnering with a high traffic publication that over indexed with Canadian readers, Audible reached highly relevant consumers.

CONNECT

Used insights on audience interaction with custom content to inform future decisions on editorial.

Higher engagement against self help topics led to a tailored promotional strategy.

Sponsored articles can be a tool to highlight new product launches and original content.

ENGAGE

Relied on relatable content to entice the audience to engage with the brand.

Ultimately, we have found that content marketing successfully hit brand objectives by delivering stronger engagement rates and above average CTR.
