AUDIBLE CA, GOOGLE APP CAMPAIGN

audible

M&C Saatchi Performance has been working with Audible Canada since 2017 when they launched into the Canadian market. We were appointed to support with digital marketing across multiple platforms, including paid search and social channels.

Audible is an online audiobook and podcast service that allows users to purchase content. This content can be purchased individually or under a subscription model via the Audible app.

The marketing challenge is twofold, with low brand consideration in the English-speaking part of Canada and low brand awareness in the French-speaking part.

A further challenge is the highly competitive market that Audible is operating in, making gaining cut-through with new subscribers while maintaining an efficient CAC a challenge.

In order to gain cut-through, we developed a creative strategy for Google App Campaigns (GAC) that launched new, segmented creative based on what potential customers were listening to, thereby piquing their interest and increasing the opportunity for installing the app.

THE BRIEF:

Drive efficient user acquisition (trials and subscribers) at higher scale.

THE CHALLENGE:

Audible operates in a highly-competitive market, making it challenging to gain cut-through with new subscribers efficiently.

Additionally, Brand Consideration is low among English speakers throughout Canada, while Brand Awareness is low among French speakers in Quebec.

THE STRATEGY:

Google App Campaigns are led by machine learning, therefore there are few optimization levers to pull. This means highly engaging creative is key to success.

Following an audience study Audible conducted among its most engaged listeners, we strategized that our Google app campaigns needed a whole new creative approach, since creative is one of the most impactful optimization levers available on this channel.

Rather than focusing on genre-based messaging, we launched new ad groups segmented by listening scenario (inspiration, education, background listening, etc). By appealing to consumers with consistent themes that contextualize Audible into moments throughout their day, we were able to scale efficiently.

THE CAMPAIGN

WHAT WE DID

- Based on an audience study Audible conducted, we restructured Google App campaigns.
- By better understanding Audible's most engaged listeners, we could develop and test combinations of images, videos, and copy that cohesively bring these listening use cases to life.
- Rather than focusing on genre-based ad groups, we focused on “demand spaces” (Audible’s term for scenarios where people would listen to Audible).
- The new ad groups were split by demand space and each ad group had specific creatives developed based on the listening scenario.
- Previously, we had 2-3 ad groups with creative grouped by genres and new releases – however, this approach only positioned Audible as a content service, just like many others. The pivot to storytelling with these 5+ use cases differentiated Audible as a service you can integrate into nearly every aspect of your daily life.
- We updated creatives through a combination of new static images, video assets, and refreshed ad copy every eight weeks.
- Splitting the ad groups by demand space and developing creative for each concept helped boost efficiency significantly.

INCREASE IN BRAND AWARENESS IN FRENCH-SPEAKING PART OF CA

Overall, Google App Campaign was very effective. Not only were we able to scale the campaign, but brand awareness increased significantly in the French-speaking part of Canada and brand consideration improved in the English-speaking part of the country.

We delivered under the goal with efficient conversions and even though the market is very competitive, we were able to differentiate the brand by testing new creatives and concepts frequently.
