THE WEATHER CHANNEL: CAMPAIGN LAUNCH

The Weather Channel

M&C Saatchi Performance has been working with Allen Media Group, parent company of The Weather Channel, since 2021 to deliver successful performance marketing campaigns across their brands such as Local Now. Thanks to successful results, in 2022 M&C Saatchi Performance was briefed to launch The Weather Channel+.

The campaign objective was to grow the user base for the streaming TV product. As a subscription service, the goal is to bring new users to sign up (to a 7-day free trial). The primary KPI is Cost per Trial, and secondary KPIs of Cost per Subscription and Cost per Install are also measured to understand user retention and churn.

Challenges included ensuring audiences understood the value of paying for a weather service and ensuring potential customers understood that by subscribing customers can receive all their favorite Weather Channel coverage and features such as radar, shows and more on demand.

The initial approach was to run multiple tests in 2022, enabling learnings which would inform the ongoing strategy for 2023. For example, the team found that weather events drove highly efficient results, learning that, when delivered alongside an ‘always on’ brand approach, the most effective results were delivered.

The campaign required significant development of flexible ways of working, strategically planned campaign set up and also a very specific use of real-time data providers to ensure results were successful.

A HIGHLY STRATEGIC APPROACH

The Weather Channel

THE BRIEF:

Drive efficient user acquisition (trials and subscribers) measured via cost per trial. The 2022 activity was run to take learnings to develop 2023 strategy

THE CHALLENGE:

Firstly, TWC operates in a highly competitive market, with multiple apps and businesses dedicated to weather forecasting.

Secondary, weather is highly dynamic in nature, requiring a highly sophisticated campaign set up, team flexibility and real-time data to ensure success.

THE STRATEGY:

The initial campaign launch focus was to run testing to gather learnings in order to set the client up for success in 2023.

Testing was conducted on the following:

Geography
Testing how 'winter states' performed during the winter season compared to running media nationally

Creative
Testing messaging, CTA offers and season-specific imagery to drive trial efficiencies

Learnings
Weather events have a significant impact on results, driving trials as people seek information leading up to and during periods of inclement weather

People responded better to ads featuring familiar and key meteorologists from TWC vs. those with weather imagery

M&C SAATCHI PERFORMANCE

A HIGHLY FLEXIBLE APPROACH

The Weather Channel

Due to the unpredictable nature of weather the campaign set up required a different approach, with great focus being placed on flexible ways of working and real-time data needs.

Flexibility in our approach included:

✓ Collaborative ways of working

The client alerts the M&C Saatchi Performance team to a major weather event in advance e.g. a hurricane, winter storm, etc. The M&C Saatchi Performance team structured their media buy and campaign structure set up in a flexible way that enabled the media teams to 'switch on' media during key weather events and upweight additional media at key moments. This enables the agency team to quickly upweight additional activity in affected areas.

✓ Use of real time data

Real-time weather triggers and pre-determined creative enabled ads to activate automatically as weather events were happening. Data from weather.com would show where and when a storm was happening, triggering an associated ad to appear on web and mobile web devices, allowing for an instant and highly relevant execution.
