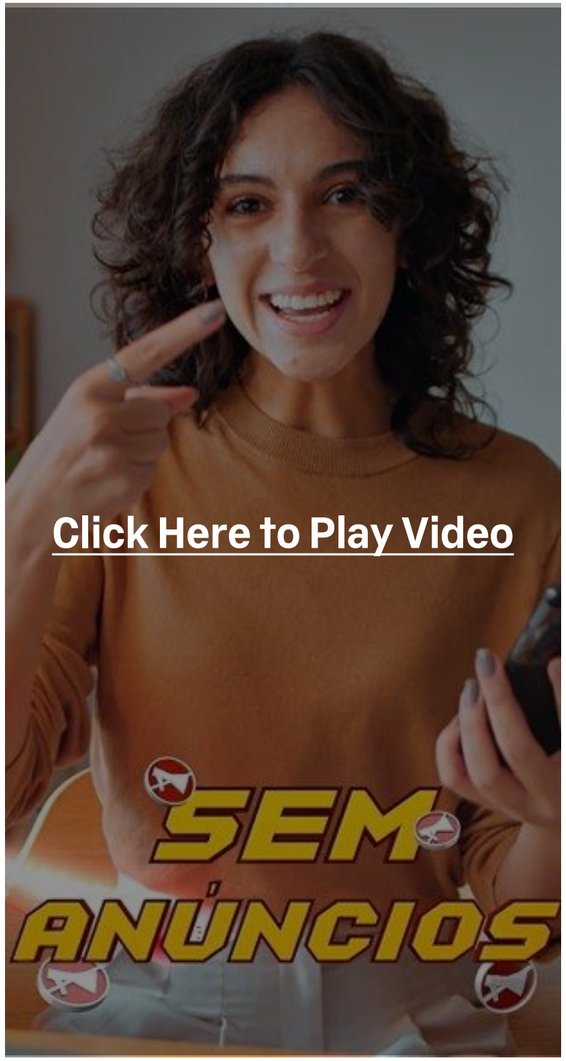
MPL MOBILE PREMIER LEAGUE



Background

Global Mobile Gaming Platform

Mobile Premier League (MPL) is a global mobile gaming platform offering users skill-based tournaments with real cash rewards. After building strong user bases in India and the U.S., MPL set its sights on LATAM, starting with Brazil, a culturally rich gaming market with few existing RMG (Real Money Gaming) players.

Objective

Driving User Acquisition

The goal was to drive user acquisition in a new and emerging market by building a fully localized funnel across both APK and iOS platforms. A key focus was on crafting an end-to-end user acquisition journey tailored to the local audience. To achieve scale efficiently, the team adopted a multi-channel performance marketing strategy.

Challenge

Gaining Trust & Traction

Entering a market with low awareness and limited trust in real money gaming (RMG) was a major challenge. Global creatives lacked the cultural nuance to engage Brazilian users, making localization essential. On top of that, strict ad policies on Google and Meta slowed momentum, requiring a careful balance of education, trust-building, and performance from day one.

Our Approach

To win in a culturally distinct and regulation-sensitive market, we went local at every step. From the outset, we launched fully localized Portuguese-language assets across the funnel, including creatives, landing pages, and in-app UX. We introduced popular regional games like Truco to build instant relevance and user affinity.

A dual-funnel rollout ensured efficiency and learning agility. We soft-launched via APK in September 2024 to test market fit and optimize conversion flows, followed by a refined iOS launch in May 2025.With ad policy restrictions on Meta and Google, we adopted a programmatic-first media strategy, prioritizing DSPs like Moloco, Liftoff, Smadex, and Mintegral for scale, speed, and flexibility.

All creatives were tailored in Brazilian Portuguese to reflect local tone, humor, and trust-building cues. Messaging focused on familiarity, fun, and safe gameplay, ensuring cultural resonance while driving performance through carefully chosen, high-impact media channels.

The Result

The campaign drove sharp growth across installs, engaged payers, and first-time depositors, proving the impact of a localized, programmatic-first strategy. Despite rapid scaling, costs stayed efficient with a $1.5 CPI and strong CPAs. The result: meaningful performance without compromising efficiency in a complex new market.
